

Questions to ask yourself when dealing with igneous rock textures:

1. Within that rock, are there two different distinct sizes of interlocking crystals or are the interlocking crystals about the same size? Warning--color differences may make you think there are two different sizes.

2. Are the interlocking crystals large enough for you to see with the unaided eye or are they too small?